Besides, it's always fun to comment on other people's efforts. I've been pretty well off all week. I'm not yet diagnosed with the Norovirus, but I am just a little under the weather. I've had a fairly odd workout routine the last few days. The first three days I've been doing Barbell Squats with a 65# Squat day on Monday, 100# Squat on Tuesday, and then 135# Squats on Wednesday. On Thursday, I've been doing a deadlift day and I've been very weak. It's been almost everything on the floor. Friday night I did my first Deadlift only. I did 50-75# of deadlifts with two warm-up sets of dumbbell rows, bands and military press. Saturday, the weather was fabulous, so I worked on my pull-up/chin-up split. I did 50 pull-ups every day for the past three days. The first two days were all muscle ups, but the other day I did a small, set of pull-ups, followed by a set of muscle ups. Monday was a Long Jumps Day. I didn't do one dumbbell squat or deadlift all day. It was easy to eat real food all day and I've been feeling better. Tuesday I was running and swimming in the river at the YMCA. I only swam for 2 miles and took a very easy trail run. Wednesday, I did the same. Thursday was the day that I had to walk through a huge line of volunteers to get into the gym. I've got a gym membership, but I never use it. I bought an all day pass, but then I got sick. I figured I'd get better after a day off and a nice long swim. I made it through the half of my slow walk in the first ten minutes of that swim, but halfway into the slow walk, I could barely get my head above water. I felt a little better at the YMCA after my last swim, but then
